Jack Keegan's bright blue eyes and mischievous leprechaun grin sparkle as he pours Guinness Stout into a tall beer glass.

"It's rich. I love it," he says.

Stout is a familiar sight at Keegan's Steak House, Emmett, where the local Irish population takes a break from farming and tending to business. St. Patrick's Day seems to be a favorite stout occasion, when Irish celebrate their patron saint and non-Irish use it as an excuse to drink.

"A lot of people drink it mixed in with regular beer," Keegan said of the stout. "But a real Irishman drinks it straight," he said, smiling at the other Irish faces around the bar.

Guinness is characterized by a dark brown color and a muddy water consistency. Its taste is described by stout fans as rich and smooth. People who don't like it call it bitter and heavy.

Christine Ryan, 24, a Port Huron Hospital secretary, tried it only recently, but she's sold on it.

"It's smooth — almost like an Irish whiskey. I drink it slower than other beers because I like it better," she said. Ryan, an Emmett native, has enjoyed tasting Irish Mist whiskey for several years, claiming, "One sip warms you right up."

Guinness Stout gets its full-bodied flavor from a special brewing process, using fresh spring water drawn from St. James Wells in County Kildare, and special barley. The yeast used for Guinness is from the same strain used by Arthur Guinness in 1759.

The Irish treat Guinness as a national drink, according to some Emmett Irish. Guinness is consumed in pubs all year, and during the annual Galway Oyster Festival, where the dark brew is used to wash down raw oysters.

But despite the stereotype of an Irishman who likes his alcohol, not all Irish enjoy imbibing of the spirits. Jokes about Irish drinkers go over like a lead balloon with some Emmett Irish.

"They expect you to drink more because you're Irish," said Daniel Kissane, 75, a retired farmer Emmett farmer. Kissane stopped drinking 15 years ago, he said.

"If you don't take any, they say, 'You can't be a real Irishman.'" Kissane said. Kissane was born in the Kerry settlement, an all-Irish area of Emmett Township.

Madeline "Mid" Keegan, a Keegan's Steak House owner, said people in Ireland don't drink as much as Americans tend to say Irish do. "They entertain at home. They'll sing and tell jokes, and have a great time. But if they do give you a drink, you'd better be sitting in a chair," she said, laughing at memories of her Irish friends filling large tumblers with Irish whiskey.

But Mid enjoys her share of Irish brew, and grins as she recalls a friend's toast:

"If this is the spirit, may it often appear."

A SPECIAL PERSON

Gladys Coady is a very special lady - always cheerful and very energetic. When Gladys moved to Yale three years ago, we gained a lady with a talent for making rolls and she also likes to cook. She volunteers for cooking dinners on Mondays and Thursdays here at the Center often. For that we are thankful.

Gladys is also a firm believer of walking in good weather, and it is not unusual to see her out with a shopping bag on her arm, headed for town.

Although Gladys has raised a large family and has many grandchildren; we appreciate the fact that she manages to give so much of herself as a volunteer at the Yale Center. You're a real inspiration to us Gladys, and make this little corner of our world a nicer place to be.

"You show the difference one person can make".

THE ENEMY

I am more powerful than the combined armies of the world. I have destroyed more men than all the wars of all nations. I massacre thousands of people every year. I am more deadly than bullets, and I have wrecked more homes than a cabal of the world's most sensuous women.

In the United States alone, I steal over $500 million each year. I spare no one, and I find victims among the rich and poor alike, the young and old, the strong and weak. Widows know me to their everlasting sorrow. I loom up in such proportions that I cast my shadow over every field of labor.

I lurk in unseen places and do most of my work silently. You are warned against me, yet, you heed me not. I am relentless, merciless and cruel. I am everywhere — in the home, on the streets, in the factory, at railroad crossings, on land, in the air and on the sea.

I bring sickness, degradation and death, yet few seek me out to destroy me. I crush, I maim, I will give you nothing and I may rob you of everything you have.

I am your worst enemy — I am CARELESSNESS.

The United States Coast Guard Cutter

BRAMBLE

The U. S. Coast Guard Cutter BRAMBLE is a class "C" buoy tender with a complement of six officers and forty-one enlisted personnel. Her duties include: aids to navigation, search and rescue, and icebreaking. She is responsible for maintaining the system of buoys and lighthouses which assist vessels in safe navigation from Lake St. Clair to Rogers City, Michigan. During the winter months on the Great Lakes, BRAMBLE's capabilities as an icebreaker, enable her to assist ships in distress and break ice for flood relief.

History

BRAMBLE was built by the Zenith Dredge Company in Duluth, Minnesota. She was launched October 23, 1944 and placed in Coast Guard commission April 22, 1944. In the spring, she departed the Great Lakes and proceeded to San Pedro, California, where she performed aids to navigation duties. In 1945, BRAMBLE was transferred to Juneau, Alaska for supply duty and aids to navigation work in the Aleutian Islands.

After the termination of World War II, BRAMBLE's homeport was San Francisco where she was responsible for aids to navigation in the Bay area. Except for a brief stay in Hawaii from 1946 to 1949, she remained stationed in this area. During this period, BRAMBLE participated in "Operation Crossroads", the first test of an atomic bomb's effect on surface ships.

BRAMBLE was stationed in San Juan, Puerto Rico, from 1949 to 1953 when she was reassigned to Miami Beach, Florida. At this time, renewed interest in the fabled Northwest Passage brought about another movement of BRAMBLE.

The Coast Guard Cutters SPAR and STORIS, along with BRAMBLE, were selected to attempt a forced passage along the northern shore of Canada, from the Pacific to the Atlantic Ocean. Preparations for the difficult voyage included the fitting of a stainless steel propeller and strengthening of the bow to withstand tremendous pressures created by the Arctic ice pack.

On July 1, 1957, the task force (having rendezvoused in Seattle, Washington) departed for the Atlantic via the Bering Straits and Arctic Ocean. The ships traveled through 4500 miles of semi-charted water to recross the Arctic Circle into the Atlantic. The success of the mission distinguished the three cutters as the first surface ships to transit the Northwest Passage.

BRAMBLE returned to Miami Beach until 1962, when she was transferred to Detroit, Michigan to perform missions of aids to navigation, search and rescue, and icebreaking throughout the Great Lakes. From 1962 to 1974, continued years of operation had taken their toll on BRAMBLE and in August of 1974 she was once again sent to the shipyard in Curtis Bay, Maryland for major renovation and overhaul. Her engines were removed and rebuilt. The berthing areas for enlisted personnel were expanded and modernized. A new hydraulic boom was installed, along with

The couple is honeymooning in Beaverton, Ore. They will live in Port Huron.

Death brings fond memories

Hazel Leonard

PERSPECTIVE

Sometime during the night of May 20, 1981, the life that had begun in Columbia, S.C., June 8, 1899, came to an end. Our mother, Grace Smith, died.

In the same week death came to two other families in the black community. Walter Short, who had owned and operated Short's Grocery Store on Moak Street for many years, died Monday at the age of 83. On Thursday afternoon, news came of the untimely death of Arthur McMillan, son of my friends and neighbors, Virginia and Ernest McMillan.

And may there be no sadness of farewells,
When I embark;
For though from out our bourne of Time and Place
The flood may bear me far,
I hope to see my Pilot face to face
When I have crossed the bar.

- Alfred, Lord Tennyson

For many years I have looked at my mother and reflected upon reasons given by sociologists for the troubles which abound in black communities. Grace grew up in the south at a time when black people worked from sunup to sundown, and worked for a week for less money than I make in an hour. When the four children were very young, the family moved from South Carolina to Florida because grandfather Malachi had heard that more money could be earned in Florida.

My grandmother had had a year of college. My grandfather could not read or write. They should never had married and quarreled bitterly throughout their lives together — but each of them loved their children and they remained together.

Life in Florida was hard. My grandfather's work was so far away that he came home only on weekends. George worked in the celery fields while a schoolboy of eight. Grace remembered doing a load of washing before walking two miles to school in the morning, and ironing that evening after school the clothes she had washed in the morning. But the family always managed to own a home and to maintain high standards.

In 1914, they pulled up stakes and moved to Michigan, lured by the tales of high-paying jobs in the city of Detroit. My grandfather, grandmother and the oldest sons, George and Bill, found work immediately while Grace and the youngest brother, John, enrolled in high school. By 1924, Grace was married — unhappily. My grandfather had died during the flu epidemic at the end of World War I — my grandmother had decided that she didn't want to rear her family in Detroit and sold their home, purchasing a farm in Smiths Creek with the proceeds. Grace had me, Helen and a son who died as an infant when she left her husband in Detroit and moved out to the farm with my grandmother and her brother. Around 1925, they sold the family farm and moved to Port Huron. None of us saw my father again.

Grace had two children to support and no skills other than the ability to do housework. This she did for 25 years. The pay was poor and the hours were long. For many years she worked in Detroit because the pay was better. My grandmother took care of us, and Grace visited when she could. A second marriage of a few years ended when her husband, James Smith, died of pneumonia in 1937 and she moved to Port Huron.

Helen and I graduated from high school and somehow we went to college. Grace's days as a worker in someone else's home came to an end.

For us, my mother will always be a symbol of the thousands of black women in this country who have accomplished goals in spite of poverty and prejudice and the lack of any skill except the ability to work hard. She had not been well for many years. Each day I saw her fail and knew that her smile hid pain from arthritis, sinus, high blood pressure and a failing heart. She remained proud and happy and eager to be of service — an incomparable woman, mother, friend.

AN UNSCHEDULED DUMPING of sand took place last Wednesday when a truck driven by Dean Moran of Goodells turned the corner of Main and Division in Richmond just before 8 a.m. The fifth wheel broke off from the mount on the tractor causing the first load to dump over, although the second load stayed upright. The gravel train is owned by Weston Trucking Company of Port Huron. Ballor Trucking of New Haven used its heavy equipment to right the vehicle. Access to eastbound Division was closed during the cleanup.

Arrangements were made by Kammeraad Funeral Home.

The Twenty-Third Psalm

The Lord is my shepherd; I shall not want.
He maketh me to lie down in green pastures:
He leadeth me beside the still waters.
He restoreth my soul: He leadeth me in the paths of righteousness for His name's sake.
Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil:
for thou art with me; Thy rod and
thy staff they comfort me.
Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies: thou anointest my head with oil; my cup runneth over.
Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life: and I will dwell in the house of the Lord forever.

Treasured Seasons

For everything there is an appointed season.
And a time for everything
under heaven-
A time for sharing,
a time for caring:
A time for loving.
a time for giving;
A time for remembering,
a time for parting.
You have made everything
beautiful in its time
For everything You do remains forever.

FAITH LOOKS ACROSS THE STORM

Faith looks across the storm
It does not doubt
Or stop to look at clouds
And rains about.

Faith does not question why
When all God's ways
Are hard to understand,
But trusts and prays.

Faith seeks the greatest gifts
And asks not sight;
It does not need to see
Christ is its light.

Above the tempest's roar
Faith hears God's voice;
And with its hand in His Faith can rejoice.

Faith fears no cloud or rain
That life can bring;
Faith looks across the storm
And still can sing.

My Jesus have mercy on the soul of

FRANCIS A. SLAGHT

Born: November 22, 1914

Died: August 4, 1985

O GENTLEST heart of Jesus ever present in the Blessed Sacrament, everconsumed with burning love for the poor captive souls in Purgatory, have mercy on the soul of Thy departed servant. Be not severe in Thy Judgement, but let some drops of Thy Precious Blood fall upon the devouring flames, and do Thou O merciful Saviour send Thy angels to conduct Thy departed servant to a place of refreshment, light and peace.

May the souls of all the faithful departed, through the mercy of God, rest in peace. Amen.

FOOTPRINTS

One night a man had a dream. He dreamed he was walking along the beach with the Lord. Across the sky flashed scenes from his life. Each scene, he noticed two sets of footprints in the sand; one belonging to him and the other to the Lord.

When the last scene of his life flashed before him, he looked back at the footprints in the sand. He noticed that many times along the path of his life there was only one set of footprints. He also noticed that it happened at the very lowest and saddest time in his life.

This really bothered him and he questioned the Lord about it. "Lord, you said that once I decided to follow you, you'd walk with me all the way. But I have noticed that during the most troublesome times in my life, there is only one set of footprints. I don't understand why when I needed you most you would leave me.

The Lord replied, "My precious, precious child, I love you and I would never leave you. During your times of trial and suffering, when you see only one set of footprints, it was then that I carried you."
